

He didn't leave Dirtfish because of a difference of opinion or leadership style. He left Dirtfish because they fired him. He lost his job first and foremost because he was nasty to everyone and terrible to work with. But the final straw was when he intercepted his own garnishment letters in an attempt to prevent one of his victims from collecting on her judgment against him for unpaid debts.

Unfortunately for the rest of us, his employer just wanted to be rid of him and didn't want to waste the time and effort to press charges. How many more people have let him get away with things because it was too much trouble to hold him accountable? How many more will it take before he is stopped, or at least deported?
